

To Whom it may concern:

Dr. Homer does a great job creating realistic but taxing expectations. In class he would breakdown the material into simple examples and he would walk through each example and answer any questions that we had. After going over a concept we were given a challenging homework assignment that helped us further explore and learn the concept ourselves. Dr. Homer was willing to help us if we got stuck. He would have us explain the problem and walk through our solution until we were able to understand the problem better and find the mistake. Professor Homer is an encourager and does a fantastic job encouraging students in their work.

Dr. Homer also does a good job building relationships with students. He attended most of the SITC departmental game nights. One fond memory I had was when he was the narrator for mafia and we voted to kill the narrator so he had to talk in a zombie voice. Also Dr. Homer works well with the other professors in the department and he is willing to help them out whenever needed.

Sincerely,
