

slowly study religions, I find the most credibility to belong to Christianity, though I have much studying to do and wisdom to achieve.

My worldview, in relation to Western civilizations would match the ignorance of the Early medieval European civilization and the lack of understanding of the Mesopotamians, and probably least matches the Roman solution of pledging allegiance to the human power (then the emperor, now perhaps the government, or just other people in general.)

I really hope you could read this.

I enjoyed the class more than any other history class I could have taken and I will recommend you to others (especially my sisters).
