Dear Profs,

The due date for my capstone is drawing to an end, as is my work on it. The capstone is due signed by all of you as committee members on Friday, by 5pm. I wanted to check with each of you as to when we could meet to ascertain the signature and be done with such business. I think I will have it presentable and ready by Thursday at the latest- and I realized that is pushing it close, but the semester has been a hectic one. Lots of things are drawing to a close simultaneously I hope you'll pardon the lack of foresight.

Thank you for your help and consideration.

Best,

Dr. Elliott,

I may not see you this Sunday, so I thought I might trouble you with an email. The undergraduate research festival is next week. I'll be presenting on Thursday, in the 9:30-11am session. I'll be second in the line up.

The instructions from the Undergraduate Research dept are not clear, but the implication is that most mentors will be present. I don't know if that is accurate or not, but it does explicitly say to inform your mentor of your presentation time. So, all that to say, I'd love for you to attend, but if you're unable to, I completely understand.

Additionally, if you're available sometime in the next week to chat about the direction of the paper, I think I have some updates. In short, I'd like to scale back the historical research and focus more on implications for contemporary society and education. I'll tell you more about it when we're next able to talk.

Hope you and Silas and Jeremy are well!

Best,
lam

Luke,

I'm so sorry, but my postpartum follow-up appointment with my ob-gyn is scheduled for Thursday at 9:30. I've already rescheduled it once and don't feel like I can do so again. I'm sure you'll do a wonderful job, and I'm sorry I won't be there to bask in your brilliance!

Are you wanting to chat before Thursday's presentation? If so, it will probably have to be Tuesday or Wednesday for me--Jeremy's parents are in town until then.

best,
KRE

No problem! I didn't expect you to be there particularly, not in the least since I managed to catch you in your last week before you come back to classes. Bad timing is a talent of mine.

I would love to talk over the presentation. I won't be presenting a lot of new material (that will be going into my capstone, more likely) since I have such a time constraint and a lot of material to get through. I would love some advice on how to talk through a paper of this type, though. I'm assuming its a bit different than an English presentation. I am free in the afternoon on Tuesday, between 11:30am and about 1 pm, and for a bit after 4:20pm. If any of those work for you, that would be wonderful! If not, I'll manage. Sorry for all the bother.

Best,
lam

Luke,

I can do either one of those times. If it's the noon hour, I'd need to ask you to come to the house, and I would have Silas with me, so my attention would be somewhat divided. At 4:20 I can meet you on campus and leave Silas with Jeremy. Whichever you prefer is fine.

I'm conflicted, because I have an appointment at noon (i realized this afternoon at work), but then again, I could see a lot of Silas then too. Haha.

As much as I would love that, 4:30 should work for me. Would you like to meet in the library? I'm finishing up the notes and presentation media tonight, so we can go over those briefly if you like. Thanks so much for being willing to meet with me. Let me know if its any trouble, and we can make a different plan.

Also, I had a brain wave: would you be willing to sit as an audience for me while I give the thing a run through? I can book a room in the learning commons so we won't have to shout over the din of the common floor.

Absolutely. 4:30 in the library, and we'll do a run through. I'm looking forward to hearing it!
