Mark,

I am attaching my two revised syllabi for HIST 117 and 118. I shaped them each a bit to more closely align with the requirements for the Cultural Awareness menu. With your approval, I'll send these on to Jennifer for consideration by the UUAC ahead of this Wednesday's meeting.

Thanks.

Kelly,

Those look great. Thanks for doing that. Now is this to be a kind of base syllabus that teachers of this course (like me) can alter slightly to suit them? If so, then let's use them. (Although p. 1 of HIST 118 says the course starts with events in 1450 -- I think that's supposed to be 1550, isn't it?)

Thanks,
Mark

Mark,

Good, I'll forward them on to the UUAC. Yes, of course we should assume that these can be altered slightly to best fit the needs and strengths of each professor. I change the readings just about every time, myself.

I actually start my 118 in 1450 because I want to get the voyages of discovery and exploration in there in the first week. I don't cover them in 117.

Thanks for your flexibility. I'm certainly learning a lot about academic councils and how one deals with them this year.

Hi Tracy,

I ended up taking both 117 and 118 before the UUAC for Cultural Competency, because they wanted confirmation of a common syllabus that both Mark and I would use before they would pass both classes. So I've attached both here. With the UGEC, Mark did 117 and I did 118, and we had no problem. Bob McKelvain was on UUAC and turned out to be a bit more discriminating. He was very nice about it, though.
