

Abilene Christian University
Department of Political Science

POLS 227 International Relations
Student Learning Outcomes

Students will understand the complexity of world political theories and political systems

Students will understand security theory and historical practice, from the Peace of Westphalia through the Cold War and to the present, including nuclear proliferation, terrorism, and transnational criminal activity

Students will understand economic theory and practice, including trade and investment, and the modern age of globalization

Students will understand the challenges and successes of foreign aid and development

Students will understand the role and limitations of international law and organizations